

VACANCY for IT Director

As many of you will know Audax UK has been in existence for 40 years now and has been operating on its current IT platform for many years. Audax UK uses information technology for a variety of purposes including the provision of services to members, event entrants, and event organisers, as well as to provide administrative support for the directors, delegates, and volunteers, who run our operations.

The Board and members have approved a major investment in the IT infrastructure and are looking for an IT Director to lead this project. This is an Executive Director position which is subject to election at three year intervals.

It is intended that the IT Director will perform a strategic role working with the team of volunteers who manage the current system along with a group of IT professionals working on the specification for the new system and identifying potential suppliers. It is acknowledged that the new system may well need to be maintained and supported by external or paid resources, it is expected that the IT Director will recommend the most appropriate partner and be the liaison between the Board and selected provider.

Applicants should possess identifiable experience of the procurement, management, and maintenance of IT systems, and experience of dealing with such persons or organisations as may be involved in such processes.

The position offers members the chance to make a substantial contribution to the development of Audax UK, and should also be prepared to engage in the Board's current strategy, and its implementation and development in future years.

Any member considering taking on this challenging and rewarding position and wanting more information about it should contact either the Board Chair, Chris Crossland.
